(646) 468-6115
ANDREWRCALDERON@GMAIL.COM

ANDREW RODRIGUEZ CALDERON

SKILLS

I am a data reporter and adjunct professor in journalism with a focus on data manipulation, analysis, visualization and product design + community engagement reporting.

JOURNALISM EXPERIENCE

The New School, New York — Adjunct Professor

MAY 2021 - PRESENT

- Data, Design & Community Engagement (Spring 2022)
- Community Engaged Journalism (Fall 2021)

The Marshall Project, New York — Data Reporter

JAN 2019 - PRESENT

- Reported on award-winning investigative stories about criminal justice and immigration, analyzed data for reporting
- Cleaned and processed large and complex government data
- Built and designs data visualizations
- Created how-to guides for stories and published open source manuals to make data analyses replicable

Columbia University, New York — Cross-borders Data Investigations Fellow

AUG 2018 - JAN 2019

- Investigated U.S.-based, right-wing evangelical groups that use dark-money to promote anti-LGBTQ policies in Central and South America
- Published investigation with NBC

EDUCATION

Columbia University, New York — Master of Science (Data Journalism)

2017 - 2018

AWARDS

- "Mauled: When Police Dogs Are Weapons."
    - Pulitzer Prize in National Reporting - June 2021

- "Think Debtors Prisons Are a Thing of the Past? Not in Mississippi,

- Collier Prize - September 2021
- Goldsmith Prize for Investigative Reporting - April 2021
- Harry Frank Guggenheim Excellence in Criminal Justice Reporting Ward - February 2021
- Al Neuharth Innovation in Investigative Journalism Award - October 2020
- February Sidney Award - February 2020